

BIO: Dr. Jay Udell is a Cardiologist and Clinician-Scientist at Women's College Hospital and the Peter Munk Cardiac Centre of the University Health Network; and an Assistant Professor of Medicine at the University of Toronto. He has a research focus on the cardiovascular benefits and risks of diabetes therapies and novel risk factor interventions, such as influenza vaccination. His team's work is leading to alterations in national and international practice guidelines and impacting clinical practice.