

In this presentation, we will review the common risk factors associated with development of atrial fibrillation and discuss recent evidence for risk factor and lifestyle modification as a treatment modality for AF. We will discuss practicalities of incorporating this evidence into practice and highlight areas where more research is needed.